Rubilux

Functional and handsome, the Coco storage unit employs glass doors so its contents can be easily located. It is available in walnut veneer and solid walnut, two sizes, and can be modified to house an entertainment system. P.O. Box 1070, Geyserville, CA 95441; 707-857-3455; rubilux.com. circle 295

Casamilano

Rodolfo Dordoni's cabinet is all shimmer and shine. The B&W 90 alternates bands of white lacquer and mirror—or black lacquer and smoked mirror—and has interior drawers to match. Property, 14 Wooster Street, New York, NY 10013; 917-237-0123; propertyfurniture.com. circle 300

Davis

Since meetings, like people, come in many shapes and sizes, so does the Segno conference table. A wide assortment of tops are available, as are various configurations. Ingeniously designed legs slide easily into integrated tabletop mounts. And, since no tools are required for assembly, installation will run smoothly—even if the meeting doesn't. 2401 South College Drive, High Point, NC 27261; 336-889-2009; davisfurniture.com. circle 299

Farrago

Reeta Gyamlani's Oasis is a refreshing take on the meeting table. It features a stylishly curvaceous rosewood veneer base, a glass-insert top, and customizable cabling cutouts.

504 LaGuardia Place, 5th Floor, New York, NY 10012; 212-473-7191. circle 296

HBF

Joe Ricchio's Cortona tables embrace the same vocabulary of clean lines and tubular steel as the earlier pieces in the series. Complementing the collection's existing lounge seating, these occasional and coffee tables come in several heights and sizes, with tops in maple veneer, frosted glass, or a solid-surface acrylic in alabaster white. P.O. Box 8, Hickory, NC 28603; 800-801-8033; hbf.com. circle 297

Pallucco Italia

The Push-In modular work system by Ueli Biesenkamp consists solely of three pared-down components: a horizontal work surface, a vertical storage element, and a lower service container. It's flexible enough for nearly any workplace, and good-looking enough for the home. Totem Design, 71 Franklin Street, New York, NY 10013; 212-925-5506; totemdesign.com. circle 298
